Myths & Facts: Online Exclusive

Is Israel responsible for the 2014 war with Hamas?

It is easy to demonstrate that Israel was not responsible for the Gaza War by pointing out that it did not start until Hamas killed three Israeli teenagers and subsequently bombarded Israeli civilian areas with hundreds of rockets.

Hamas was held responsible not only by Israel and the West, but also by the Palestinian Authority \(PA\), which blamed Hamas for starting and prolonging war.

Who Will Stand up to the Jihadists?

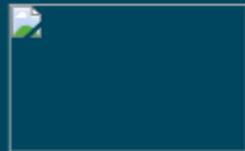

While the world reacts with outrage and horror to the unconscionable actions of ISIS, including the beheading of two Americans, no attention is paid to another country that resorts to this form of punishment. Ironically, that country is one of America's principal Arab allies in the region, and a partner in the fight against ISIS.

That country is Saudi Arabia, which beheaded at least 19 men in August 2014 alone. Saudi Arabia is led by a Sunni regime that opposes ISIS only because its growth could threaten the monarchy.

The complaint is sometimes heard that critics of Israel are silenced and American Jews, in particular, are unwilling to publicly condemn policies that liberals believe are indefensible or even unconscionable.

The truth is that critics of Israel have a wide open field for expressing their views. The more critical, in fact, the more likely to be published by the major media, which views Jews attacking Israeli policies as the equivalent of "man bites dog." As Haaretz columnist Ari Shavit puts it, "criticism of Israel gives the writer a place of honor in the international media."
