

The Trouble with

In the royal-wedding afterglow, Buckingham Palace still has a major P.R. problem: how to handle Prince Andrew, Britain's trade ambassador and fourth in line to the throne. The prince's dissolute lifestyle, links to unsavory foreign potentates, and friendship with the American registered sex offender Jeffrey Epstein are undercutting the Queen's efforts to rehabilitate the monarchy. And while many blame Andrew's problems on his perennially broke ex-wife, Sarah Ferguson, EDWARD KLEIN discovers some insiders pointing to another woman—his mother herself
