 This Week on Kickstarter

NOVEMBER 01, 2012

This week, Kickstarter officially opened to creators in the UK. Hooray! We're eagerly exploring the first projects from a new shore, but in the meantime we've got Mick Jagger, a magical picture book, and an award-winning podcast that casts an inspiring light on the state of our nation — just in time for Election Day.

Rock of ages

Between 1969 and 1972, Village Voice columnist and radio personality Howard Smith recorded interviews with some of the era's most iconic creative figures, including Mick Jagger, Andy Warhol, Dennis Hopper, and Jerry Garcia. The original audio reels have been stashed away since the days they originally aired — until now. The Smith Tapes box set will compile 18 of the collection's most notable conversations, preserving the cultural legacy of a singular generation for decades to come.

CLARENCE AND THE SPOON

CLARENCE AND THE SPOON

by Jeff Nitzberg

 Category Children's Book

 Location Austin, TX

Play with your food

Clarence and the Spoon serves up a magical tale of mayhem, manners — and a whole lot of soup. Each richly illustrated page offers a peek into the imagination of the book's namesake character, while asking the all-important question: "Why use a spoon when your hands work just as well?" Author Jeff Nitzberg says it's exactly what he would have wanted to read as a weird little kid himself. Our quirky inner child couldn't agree more.

State of the Re:Union: Season 3C

State of the Re:Union: Season 3C

by Al Letson

 Category Journalism

 Location Jacksonville, FL

Stories from sea to shining sea

State of the Re:Union is an award-winning public radio show that shares the stories of everyday people doing extraordinary things. Creator Al Letson has traveled from the Mississippi River to Wyoming, and covered everything from a network of Baltimore-based veterans to a super passionate Superman fan — all in an effort to explore the little ways that individuals and communities can make a major impact.
