Does the Palestinian Authority Condemn and Prevent Terror?

Many people have forgotten, but one of the principal reasons that Israel decided to recognize the PLO and engage in peace talks was because Yasser Arafat renounced the use of terrorism and other acts of violence. Sadly, peace has not been achieved primarily because terrorism has never ceased. Instead, during negotiations subsequent to the Oslo agreements, the Palestinians repeated their promise to end terror in an effort to extract additional concessions from Israel. This pattern has continued to the present day when Palestinians make new demands on Israel while, simultaneously, encouraging violence against Israelis.

Academic Foxes Guarding the Hen House

Universities have been very successful in preventing anyone outside the faculty from exercising any oversight on what goes on in classrooms and lecture halls by hiding behind the mantra of academic freedom. Perhaps this would not be such a problem if there was any consistency in enforcement of academic freedom, but, when it comes to Jews and Israel, there is not. As many commentators have noted, the types of things regularly said and promoted on campuses about Jews and Israel are never tolerated when they are directed at women, ethnic minorities or gay students. What's worse is that academic departments often sponsor some of the most non-scholarly and blatantly anti-Semitic speakers and programs, giving them the veneer of respectability and the imprimatur of the university.

Fact of the Day

For the First Time, Israel Names Muslim-Arab As Deputy Police Commissioner

The Israeli police force welcomed its first Muslim-Arab deputy police commissioner in February 2016. Jamal Hakroush, who since 2010 had served as the Deputy Chief Officer of the Coastal Police District, was appointed to his new position by Security Minister Gilad Erdan. Hakroush will head a new division within the Israeli police force, tasked with promoting law enforcement in Israel's Arab sector, and recruiting fellow Muslims and/or Arabs to join the force.
