Study shows that head injuries in war, sports, auto accidents, slip and falls, etc., can increase chances of dementia. New findings were reported this week at the Alzheimer's Association International Conference on Alzheimer's Disease.

Injuries of Veterans, Football Players Linked to Dementia

Two studies, one of veterans and the other of former professional football players, provide new evidence that head injuries such as concussions are linked to dementia later in life and may make the brain more vulnerable to the development of symptoms characteristic of Alzheimer's disease.

Florida Highway Patrol says you should pull over to the shoulder of the road if it is safe to do so and it is okay to move your car after a crash for safety reasons. They recommend that if you get out of your car look for protection - guardrails or a wall. Do not stand directly behind your car facing oncoming traffic. Do walk out into traffic or try to cross the traffic at any time.

We just left a hearing in federal court in Fort Lauderdale where U.S. District Court Judge James Cohn has granted final approval of a class action settlement which creates an $8 million fund for class members with home healthcare insurance policies issued by Washington National Insurance Company (WNIC).
November 12, 2010 at 2:49pm

Farmer Jaffe Weissing At the hearing, Steve Jaffe offered an impassioned and convincing argument demonstrating the fairness of the proposed settlement in Ruderman v. WNIC, a class action. Jaffe explained that "our clients were wrongfully denied insurance benefits when they were at their most vulnerable and could not care for themselves", adding that this settlement will provide "concrete and significant benefits when needed most".
