JANET ECHELMAN in Vancouver

JANET ECHELMAN in Vancouver

By B A F

Janet Echelman makes webbed, ghostly sculptures that move around like huge medusas in the sky. Now, her biggest piece yet (700ft!) is on its way to Vancouver, where it will be suspended in the air above the downtown waterfront. The piece commemorates the 30th anniversary of the TED conference, where Janet will speak.

Being George Clooney

Being George Clooney

By Paul Mariano

What happens when George Clooney can't be George Clooney? The documentary Being George Clooney explores the hidden world of audio dubbing Hollywood films for foreign markets, and features a number of voice actors that look nothing like George Clooney but sound pretty similar. It's a fascinating look into a job that often goes unnoticed.

 bloom blanket

bloom blanket

By Bianca Cheng Costanzo

Bianca Cheng Costanzo, a former MIT student based in Barcelona, describes her Bloom Blanket as a meeting of math and art, which is pretty dead on.

Costanzo's blankets are loosely based on more elaborate origami forms than your average paper crane, and are both useful — they're actual blankets that keep you warm — and aesthetically pleasing.
