[REDACTED] I know you're leaving today but I wasn't sure what time. Do you want to see this show with me? I'm going to go at two with a friend. Last time I went to a jewelry store in Venice and I asked Woody, before I left, what my limit was and he said there was no limit. I therefore found a necklace that I liked for million dollars. Needless to say we did not get it. I can't wear it to Costco or Target.

No, sometimes I like antique jewelry. I think you should get the necklace in Venice as an asset investment and I'll just borrow it sometimes. I'll send you the information. The diamonds are very beautiful. Exceptionally beautiful.

It fits on the neck so beautifully. Woody heard me typing this and he said "on Jeffrey's neck?"

On plants don't want to forget remind me to tell you about

...role of hemoglobin in plants

...sent you a thing on ethylene (gas=anesthetic=hormone=stress responder can be made locally)

...pain as a negative experience to be metabolized not reacted

...cancer in plants not genetic but locally inflammatory /miscommunication and or caused by viruses or insects

...mitochondria and energetics are the most ancient important and vital part of plants and humans and all super similar everything preserved - he believes they aren't really organelles but more like visiting structures that bring energy tell you when to die and determine energetic expenditure

...forgetting or losing memory in plants has a very important purpose -helps them save energy

Makes me think that in humans memory loss might not be a real syndrome rather just exhausted and energy depleted cells that pick the easiest (and least useful thing) to stop doing to save energy. You can live forever w no memory and it doesn't hurt or affect other functions. So it's an easy thing to put on ice when you are trying to save energy. So perhaps (as it is in plants...) memory loss in humans is protective

When you are old - you are already low on energy. Anything that caused your energetics to go into a state of overdrive means they need to preserve cellular function elsewhere and shunt energy to vital function.

Goodbye memory

Think about it

When you are tired can't remember

When you are ok drugs can't remember

But when you have slept well and have real energy (or fake energy in the form of caffeine) memory is fine

Franticek is a super smart man like an encyclopedia.

Also discussed

...chronobiology and human biorhythms

..."plantoid" project being done in Europe / robotic plants

...and memory loss versus purposeful forgetfulness in plants (energetics see above)

I asked him why the field of plant/human neurobiology is so slow and he says the scientists are all blocking and no one wants to join the cause. Everyone says plants are plants and humans are humans. He thinks even with a jillion dollars the incumbent leaders in the fields will never support "open thinking and experimenting" and will use their voice to discredit and cast doubt. He says we have to wait 20-30 more years for those people to die. He says research funding doesn't even get past early stages bc the plant/human neurobio ideas get put in the "these are crazy people that believe in UFOs and werewolves" pile.

We discussed the idea of grants versus venture capital for modern science - given that VC likes to disrupt and could care less about dogma. He says for sure great idea and better than traditional path but needs clearly compelling idea to take to VC.

He says general audiences are always so surprised and even shocked to learn about the realities and similarities between plants and humans. It must be frustrating for ppl like him.

Anyway - super stimulating conversation. Heavy accent makes him sound like a genius James Bond villain.

I start meetings early tmr here in Dubai

Sent you the somewhat benevolent health idea in email. Have to at least bring up a way to do domestic health savings using their SWF although it's painful it might make money.

BG wants to think about telemedicine etc.

But these are the guys who build ski slopes in malls and they want flashy big amazing stuff.

I am not sure BG would agree but they might have a cool angle here for a few things:

1. They could become the coolest center for organ transplant (they already do more per capita) and can build super tech hub on organs and regeneration etc. imagine the world's centralized transplant hub surrounded by tons of science and tech like all the 3D printing and even artificial tissue here. Different rules.
2. They don't have to do everything in Dubai. What if they did the worlds most exclusive and awesome women's beauty clinics in NYC Monaco and LA - and bought 1 day per week of the world's greatest plastic surgeons, dermatologists and dentists and basically ran a Monday-Thursday clinic with the best docs guaranteed. It would have some infrastructure but also attract worlds best. Incidentally many of them come here anyway.

And a few are even Lebanese Armenian middle eastern etc.

3. What if they did an uber wellness retreat a la Arianna Huffington - based on the science (she participated) around telomeres and regeneration etc like a modern ASHRAM and modernized "fat camp" but not really about fat and more about wellness. Like they used to do in Switzerland.

4. What if they built a regional stroke center.

It's their #1 and 2 (depending on country) cause of morbidity and mortality - they could focus on acute and secondary stroke management and of course do endovascular (super modern) but all the other stuff too. Could be coolest one in the world and would be busy in this region. A lot of stroke and post stroke is Telemedicine. Acute interventions need to be in person but most else not. Could have a rehab center etc. there really isn't one.

I just don't know but want to at least be creative and try.
Likely my last chance dealing with stuff like this -

Let me know what you think and any other suggestions

Am gonna sleep for a few hours

Hello, sorry for being late, but I needed to find a new flat in 3 days and moved there. Actually it is a very stressful and difficult problem in Moscow. So, I need to know which will one's duties? All girls would ask me about it, if I found someone.
