Don't you fear danger like Musk? Very intrigued by Neuralink.... Did like Chopra at the beginning but have grown disappointed with him. AI fascinates me. It's rapid development. As well as how will Quantum Computing change the entire equation. My question is how soon will AI gain consciousness?

you have to define consciousness. deepak is a friend and yes - lost . . feedback is already here. chomsky is here this weekend with me in florida he believes it is a silly question. as humans have consciousness , machines have feedback loops. so careful with terms

I understand what you mean. And we go back to the basic question, what is consciousness... let's say then feelings... when will AI feel? And be able to communicate that feeling... and how will we know if it is real.

I will be more careful with words... but exactly my point. No mathematical model for feelings... therefore, that is what will make AI never like us... or will AI teach itself feelings sorry , bad question. you are speaking in broad metaphors like the weather is happy today or sad. . humans have made a word “ feelings” it has a roughly agreed meaning . no more no less. . turing said that asking whether a machine can think was too silly to answer. . machines compute, people think, birds fly , not airplanes

You are being harsh... or maybe you are too intelligent and you will need to teach me...
I like nothing more than learning
But if we become so cynical, then little to discuss apart from mathematical equations

math equations are not very useful, modeling is. . you need to have a mental model of things to try to "understand" them. we don't yet even have a definition of understanding, in computers math or people. . anyway talk tomorrow

Can you give me an example where Art is way ahead of Science? I love books and movies but Art doesn't do it for me normally. Although I appreciate/admire the Art of the Freemasonry in the building of the Cathedrals. And I adore Da Vinci.

the insights into fundamental reality, consciousness. . awareness . are much more philosophical artistic conversations than science. the language of mathematics ie probability when spoken in the ordinary vernacular are extremely misleading. ex. probability of life on other planets. makes no sense mathematically . there is no number that describes things that have only happened once. . but. people like the vocabulary of math, gives them a sense of authority. btw. Im sorry if my responses appear harsh, you will be able to see the accompanying smile on Skype
