Dear [REDACTED]

Please treat this as a confidential communication.

Thank you for contacting me. Special Agent [REDACTED] and I would like to speak with you at 9:00 a.m. your time, Tuesday, March 8, 2011. [REDACTED]

We would prefer to speak with you via Skype, if possible. We feel that a video-conference would put you a bit more at ease, and would be a better way for us to introduce ourselves to you. [REDACTED] has set up a Skype account with user name [REDACTED]

If you are unable to sign in to Skype, or if you cannot locate Special Agent [REDACTED] log-in, please send me an email. In the alternative, if we do not hear from you on Skype by 5:10, we will call you on the telephone number that you provided.

Thank you again.

Dear Ms. [REDACTED]

I am sending you this email on a strictly background, not for attribution basis. I will not disclose it nor any future communications between us without your explicit permission.

[REDACTED] has asked me to give you her cell phone number.

She is in [REDACTED]

I am copying her in by email but she will be grateful any initial contact with her is by phone. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] would prefer me to be present when you initiate communication with her. We both realize that any such communication must be in confidence. I will be there for support, not as a journalist.

[REDACTED]

I am a former investigative reporter [REDACTED] where my colleagues included [REDACTED] I understand the sensitivity of this situation.

Frankly, if I still worked there, I would publish everything that I believe happened to [REDACTED] and that now may be happening to a new generation of minors.

[REDACTED]

So [REDACTED] and I are putting our trust in you.

Best regards,
[REDACTED]
